Kingstone's customers have embraced the Flyreel experience, allowing them to conduct their home inspections at their convenience and on their terms, with no need for an in-person visit from an inspection service. More than 94% of users expressed satisfaction with using the AI assistant, with ease of use and the ability to conduct a contactless inspection as common reasons for the positive feedback.

The adoption of this technology has decreased processing time for Kingstone's underwriters by providing high-quality, real-time data directly from the policyholder. The unprecedented access to the interior of the home has also raised awareness of potential risks and hazards previously unexposed to Kingstone.

"Flyreel's AI powered-app offers Kingstone a long-term solution for customer-first inspections," said Robert Jacobson, Kingstone's Vice President of Operations. "Overall, we are seeing a quicker, smoother, and more comprehensive inspection solution for both the customers and underwriters. Kingstone is gaining actionable data in a new way that streamlines the process while also improving the outcomes."

"We're honored to support Kingstone Insurance in their mission to provide a best-in-class experience to their customers, all while improving underwriting outcomes and efficiency," said Cole Winans, CEO of Flyreel. "We're excited to be partnering with Kingstone as they remain steadfast in their commitment to protecting their homeowners with the best of today's technology."
